Biographies

David Euridge is the Executive Head Teacher of 3 Pupil Referral Units (PRU) in Surrey. Reigate Valley College gained an outstanding judgment in all areas in May 2014 and this has enabled David to support other failing PRUs.

In 2013, David became Executive Headteacher at Wey Valley College which required improvement for Ofsted. 1 year later it gained a "Good" judgement with "Outstanding" leadership. In 2015, David agreed to lead the Fordway Centre which was in special measures and about to be closed due to lack of leadership and progress. 15 months later the Fordway gained "Outstanding" in all areas.

His background has included transforming behaviour at a mainstream Special Measures school and he has a passion for supporting students with behavioural difficulties to achieve the best outcomes and be able to progress in education. David is a National Leader of Education and now supports mainstream schools with behaviour management strategies to support children with SEND.

Ian Enwright is now responsible for three Primary Pupil Referral Units (PRU) settings across Surrey. Prior to this role, he was Head of RVC Primary in 2014 and 2017 when RVC achieved "Outstanding" in all areas. He has since set up a further Primary PRU from the ground up and acted as Consultant for Fordway supporting its "Outstanding" judgement in all areas achieved in 2016.

Ian supports local mainstream schools and SENCOs in SEND Processes and arrangements alongside his present role. He frequently presents at School INSETS, Conferences and SESTA Events in reference to Behaviour Management and Behaviour Monitoring and has developed a monitoring tool that is increasingly being used across both Primary and Secondary Surrey schools. His nurture based approach and experience remains a driving force in meeting the needs of the individual vulnerable children across Surrey and his knowledge of ASD, ADHD and PDA has seen him support other local provisions across the county.

Amy Smith has been Head of School at Wey Valley College since September 2017. Previous to this role Amy worked for TBAP which operates Alternative Provisions across London, Cambridgeshire, Essex and throughout the North West of England in a variety of leadership roles. Most notably, Amy was one of the team who set-up the TBAP Residence as part of the DfE Social Innovations fund. The TBAP Residence worked with some of West London's most vulnerable young people who were either on the edge of care and/or involved in the youth justice system.

Prior to working in AP, Amy led several "Outstanding" Performing Arts departments in mainstream schools across London and Surrey.

Amy is a practitioner who believes in a creative, therapeutic and inclusive approach to behaviour management.
